COINS FROM THE MESUNO HOARD

Mr. Robert I. Nesmith's recent book, Dig for Pirate Treasure, has not only brought many of the fabulous tales of buried Buccaneer gold into perspective, but has served to throw considerable factual light on the types of coins that can properly be called "Pirate Money." In addition he has made it quite clear to his readers that there was a great deal of treasure buried or lost in the 17th and 18th Centuries and later, that had nothing at all to do with "Pirates", although the circumstances of the losses in question may have been romantic enough in their own right to attract the interest of the fireside adventurer and collector of coins.

While the collector can, with little difficulty, provide himself with the types of coins that probably made up many of the great hoards lost through enemy action, Acts of God, or the machinations of Sea Wolves as Pirates were often called, it is considerably more difficult to find pieces that have a pedigreed history showing that they were actually part of a lost treasure since recovered. The Cob 2 Escudo pieces that made up what has been called "The Mesuno Hoard" happen to be examples of a real treasure that has come to light in recent times, specimens of which are available to the collector. Mr. Nesmith mentions this hoard in passing in his book not devoting much attention to it for the good reason that there is little information available, apart from the bare record of where, under what circumstances and when the hoard was found. In view of the limited volume of information about Mesuno coins we have decided to reprint several records and comments on the hoard in this issue.

The first, and as far as we know, only contemporary account of the hoard appeared in the November 1936 issue of the "Revista del Banco de la Republica", published by the National Bank of Colombia. A translation of this article was included in the June, 1937 issue of "The Coin Collector's Journal", a Numismatic publication sponsored by the late Mr. Wayte Raymond. The translation in question follows:

"THE TREASURE OF THE MESUNO"

"On the 22nd of August of last year, in a place called "El Mesuno", on the right bank of the Magdalena River, near Honda, some workmen accidentally found a treasure made up of ancient objects and gold coins, which probably were part of a remittance sent to Spain during the Colonial times and lost due to a shipwreck.

It has not been possible to determine the exact value of it, but it is estimated at more than $15,000.00 (Colombian pesos). All the pieces found are of gold, valued at two "escudos" each, coined in the "Casa de Moneda de Bogota", as proved by the letters N. R. A. which are on most of them and which used to be the distinctive mark of the coins of that mint. On one side they have the Royal Coat of Arms, and on the other side a cross, and have the following inscription divided between the two sides: PHILIPPUS II. D. G. HISPANIARUM REX. Beside this inscription, the year 1635 appears on some of these coins, which is very strange if one takes into consideration that Phillip II died in 1598.

The "Banco de la Republica" has acquired most of this treasure, which forms part of a National coin collection, covering the Colonial and Republican eras. This is the richest and most complete collection in the country."

It can be seen that the information furnished by the National Bank of Colombia raises more questions than are answered. Nothing is said about the appearance of the hoard at the time of discovery or of it having been in a container or chest of any kind. There is doubt about the actual gold value of the find and no record appears to have been made of the number of pieces that comprised it. It is illuminating to know that the Bank "acquired most of this treasure", but it would be even more illuminating to know how many coins were acquired. Given the nature of the discovery it seems more than probable to us that many coins must have slipped into workmen's pockets and from there to the melting pot for their gold value. Even though the Bank is an official organization, the article reflects no attempt to look into the national Archives to see if by chance there was any record of a large loss of treasure in the first part of the Seventeenth Century.

It can be argued that the Bank is a large institution devoted to Banking and Government Finance and not to Numismatics. There seems, nevertheless, little excuse for the gross error in the one specific Numismatic comment made in their story of the hoard. After assigning the coins to the reign of Philip II, the writer innocently observes that some of them bear the date 1635, noting at the same time that Phillip died in 1598. What happened, of course, is that he most probably confused the name PHILIPPUS and the Roman Numeral II, for Two Escudos, with the Sovereign in question. In this case the most charitable thing to do is reflect that the poor man was not equipped to describe the coins and therefore cannot be blamed too much for his "boners". We must also recognize that the problem of attributing the coins was not made any easier by the fact that few of them carried either the date or "PHILIPPUS IIII". In the case of the specimens that have come to our attention the King's full name is seldom decipherable. The only clear numeral has been II and the date is missing.

During the last War a further commentary on the Mesuno coins was printed in the December, 1943 issue of the "Numismatic Review" published by Messrs. Stack. The article was prepared by Mr. C. S. Wilcox who acquired some of the Mesuno pieces in South America. He at least had done some work on the background of the hoard and testifies to the difficulty of finding out anything of great interest locally. In addition he divided the specimens available to him by types into four groups. This article, subject to some editing for purposes of clarity follows:

"THE SPANISH GOLD TREASURE OF EL MESUNO"

by C. S. Wilcox

According to the National Bank Review of Bogota, Colombia, dated November 1936, men working along the right bank of the Magdalena river discovered a hoard of gold coins at a bend known as El Mesuno, near the city of Honda. Honda, or more properly, San Bartolomeo de Honda, in the province of Tolima, is situated at the confluence of the Guali and Magdalena rivers. The City, only 67 miles from Bogota, dates back to the beginning of the 17th Century and has been one of the important commercial centers in South America. It was almost destroyed by earthquake in 1808. All the coins found in the hoard were double Escudos of Philip IV, dated around 1635 and struck at Bogota. Through error they were at first assigned to the reign of Philip II. Their total value was then estimated at more than $15,000.00. The Banco de la Republica acquired part of the find for the National Collection and illustrated six specimens in the Review. The "Coin Collector's Journal" of June 1937 contains a rather brief account of the find and does not add materially to the information published by the National Bank Review of Colombia. It calls attention, however, to the fact that Philip II's death occurred in 1593—thus establishing the error of the earlier assignment.

Part of the Mesuno hoard—at least 40 specimens—came to the United States. Of these, 19 specimens, which form the base for this article, were brought to this country by the writer himself. A similar coin is in the Cabinet of the American Numismatic Society. Whether it is from the hoard or not is uncertain. Another 2 Escudo piece described by Heiss and Vidal Quadras seems to have been published from a wax impression of a poorly preserved coin very similar to those in the find. The drawing is too imperfect for certainty on the point.

According to the account given by a local Padre at the church in Honda, a man who devoted many years to the study of local history, the coins were probably struck under Don Sancho Giron, Marques of Sofraga, Viceroy of New Granada. The Santa Fe de Bogota mint was first established in 1622 by the Viceroy Don Juan de Borja. It was this official who is said to have conceived the idea that the coinage of New Granada should be of the same type and design as that of the mother country. In any case, the coins themselves closely resemble the Spanish pieces of the period, except that the mint mark for the newly-established Bogota mint, "N. R. A." was added to the design. They will be described in detail later.

It is understood that the pieces were largely stored in the Viceregal money chests and not intended for general circulation. The existence of this fairly large number of crude but apparently uncirculated specimens certainly suggests that they were preserved at the time. How the treasure got to the location where it was excavated is another point of interest. Undoubtedly it formed part, or was in itself, a shipment of gold specie from the mint at Bogota to the port of Cartagena, where Spanish galleons annually picked up the shipments of treasure destined for Spain. While the buccaneers were just beginning to gather in the Caribbean about 1635, the point where this hoard was found is too far inland for it to have been intercepted by any of the sea roving expeditions at so early a date. It is much more likely to assume that the shipment was wrecked and lost while being transported down river through the rapids by small boat or canoe.

We have little definite information indicating the time of the hoard's disappearance. Tradition at Honda, where people have been looking for treasure for generations, has it that it was lost as late as 1819. During the last days of August of that year, Viceroy Samano abandoned the capital of Bogota, upon receiving word of Bolivar's victories at Boyaca and the proximity of the Liberator's armies. When the Viceroy arrived at the river port of Bodegas de Bogota, he found that the only means of transportation consisted of large canoes. He is said to have buried the gold (and jewelry as well as other valuables). His death occurred soon afterward and the location of the treasure was lost. A commission was sent from Spain to search for the buried treasure but it did not meet with success. It is possible that this story of the lost Spanish treasure became accepted locally as the explanation of the Mesuno hoard after the latter was discovered. It is only mentioned here because there is no information available that would even date the period in which the coins were lost.

The 19 coins brought to the United States by the writer show at least four distinct varieties of die-work, and possibly more. The extreme crudeness of the work makes the determination of minor variations somewhat difficult.

The coins may be described as follows:

Philip IV. 2 Escudos 1635 struck at Santa Fe de Bogota, Average size: 20-22mm. Average weight: 6.75 grams.

Obverse: Crowned shield, consisting of the arms of Castille-Leon, Aragon-Sicily, Granada, Austria, the two Burgundies, Brabant, Flanders and Tyrol—the latter two within a small shield superimposed on the lower third of the shield. Below the shield is a pomegranate, representing New Granada.

To the left of the shield are the letters, N. R. A. (Nuevo Reyno Americano) and the value. II. (Two Escudos) is on the right. The legend reads. PHILIPPVS. IIII. D. G. (Philip IV by the Grace of God). The edge has a pearl border of rough design.

Reverse: The Cross of Jerusalem, four Fleurs de Lys in the quarters, within two four-lobed borders, with pellets in the four corners. The legend reads: .HISPANIARUM. REX. 1635. (King of Spain, 1635).

Variations of die-work.

No. 1. Obv. The superimposed shield is of medium size. Rv. The annulets in the corners of the lobes are very large.

No. 2. Obv. The superimposed shield is small. Rv. The annulets are as before.

No. 3. Obv. The superimposed shield is very large. Rv. The annulets are small.

No. 4. Obv. The superimposed shield is medium size as in No. 1. Rv. The annulets are fairly large and have central dots."

Although the information on the Mesuno hoard is scanty, there is no doubt that the coins were once part of a real "buried treasure". In view of the rarity of this type of Numismatic material, and the interest in the subject aroused by Mr. Nesmith's book, we have included some of the Mesuno specimens from our stock in this List. Unfortunately, we have only three of the four types mentioned by Mr. Wilcox. None of these pieces carries the date or the Roman numeral IIII. Two have been used as cover illustrations. We can also add that, Dig for Pirate Treasure, is available on our shelves at the retail price of $6.00 a copy. This book can be whole-heartedly recommended to boys of all ages who, if their souls aren't "fettered to an office stool", are bound to enjoy the author's crackling style, lively humor, choice tales of adventure, and his estimates of the probability of any one of us ever digging up a hoard. It can be added that the book is well illustrated with many plates of actual coins.

"MEXICAN MINT MARKS

It may not be generally known to collectors of Mexican coins, that in 1895, by a decree of Porfirio Diaz, President of the Republic of Mexico, under authority of an act of the Mexican Congress passed 3rd of June of that year, reorganizing the Mints, all the older Mints except four were closed for coining purposes. San Luis, Potosi and Oaxaca were closed about 1893. The four remaining open for striking money were those of the city of Mexico, Guanajuato, Zacatecas and Culiacan. Special assay offices were continued at several of the early Mints—Oaxaca, San Luis, Monterey (which never had a Mint), Durango, Chihuahua, Alamos, Hermosillo and Guadalajara. This law went into effect July 1, 1895. Collectors of Mexican Mint marks will, therefore, find none later than that year, except the four named. The Secretary of the Treasury was authorized to close or remove to another location any or all of these Mints whenever he should think it opportune to do so. This decree was dated 15th June, 1895."

Vol. XXXVII, July (September) 1902.

Now that Mr. Harry Severin's book, GOLD AND PLATINUM COINAGE OF IMPERIAL RUSSIA, 1701 to 1911 is finally available for distribution in New York, we feel that the following brief comment on the use of Platinum in the Russian coinage will be of interest to Collectors:

"PLATINUM COINS

The use of platinum for the purposes of coinage, which was attempted by Russia in 1828, did not prove a success. The weight and other qualities of the metal, as compared with gold and silver, entitle it to be classed with them as "precious", but its rarity and the difficulty of treating it,—refining it, and preparing it for mintage—proved so great an obstacle to its usefulness, that seventeen years later it ceased to be coined. The reports of the Russian Mint state that 3, 474 pieces of twelve-roubles, 14, 847 of six-roubles, and 1, 373, 691 of three-roubles, were struck. The larger coins were very handsomely executed, and were attractive pieces, while the weight (about 3½ grammes to the rouble) seemed to give them at least full intrinsic value, when the rarity of the metal (which was seldom, if ever, mined outside of Russia at that period) was considered. The Ural Mountain mines were the chief source of supply.

Notwithstanding the great number of the three-rouble pieces struck, they seem to be now equally as scarce as their larger companions. All were demonetized more than half a century ago, and all are today regarded as of the highest rarity. It is said that when platinum began to be of importance in electrical work and experiments, about 1860, dealers in the metal bought all the obtainable platinum coins while these were available, and with them supplied the demand. This statement has been offered as one reason for their rarity, but whether it has any real factual basis we are unable to say.

P. C. W."

NOTE FOR OUR READERS

Coin Galleries can use interesting articles on coins for its regular Price Lists. If you feel willing and able to write about some aspect of your collecting interests in the field of Ancient, or Foreign Coins, we will be glad to consider any manuscript you submit to us. Manuscripts submitted must be typewritten, double spaced. We can add that manuscripts sent to us will be subjected to the ruthless editorial pen and comment of Mr. J. C. Risk. If they pass this scrutiny, we will print them in one of our forthcoming Lists, giving you full credit and making, if you do not object, some brief remarks about you and your collection. Anyone who would like to see what it feels like to have his name in print may write to Mr. Risk at the Galleries for his views both on the type of numismatic paper you would like to prepare, and the subject matter.

BIBLICAL COINS

Many Collectors have found Florence Aiken Banks' book on coins associated with the Bible to be an interesting guide to the series. In this issue we have tried the experiment of listing many of the pieces mentioned by Miss Banks according to the pages in Coins of the Bible Days. Since the author's coverage is broad, Collectors of Ancient Coins in general will find many specimens in this section that they have perhaps not thought of as "Bible Coins" before. It is accordingly suggested that the section be examined carefully.

Though the following Legionary denarii are not listed in Banks' book, they belong without doubt to the group of coins illustrated on these pages. According to Josephus Flavius the Legions V, X. and XII. took part in capture of Jerusalem. The following denarii were struck for them by Mark Anthony 31 B.C., but they circulated even later. Babelon mentions a legionary denarius with counterstamp of Vespasian.

BOOK REVIEW

Just as this issue was about to go to press we received a review of Harry Severin's GOLD AND PLATINUM COINAGE OF IMPERIAL RUSSIA, 1701-1911 by our old friend and colleague Randolph Zander, of Washington, D. C. Mr. Zander's name will be well known to many collectors of European coins. He is certainly well known to the Editor who went to Grade School with him, and that is many more years ago than either of us like to admit now. Even in those days Ran Zander was a Russian coin enthusiast. He used his enthusiasm to such good purpose that he not only assembled a nice personal collection of choice pieces, but taught himself the Russian language in the process. We could not imagine anyone better qualified to pass judgement on Severin's book and asked him to prepare an appreciation for us. His interests, academic background and linguistic accomplishments have served to give him access to source material in Russian that are closed to many of us. It is, therefore, with great pleasure that we print his opinion of the new work in English covering the Imperial Russian issues in the precious metals.

SEVERIN, H. M., Gold and Platinum Coinage of Imperial Russia from 1701 to 1911. Crown & Taler Publishing Co., N. Y., 1958. xv + 77pp, xvii plates.

Recipe for a good book: Take a corpus of the best existing references, sift with discrimination, add a generous measure of sober judgement, assemble the result in handy and usable form, garnish with handsome plates and a sprinkling of useful appendices, print and bind attractively, and serve to an audience that cannot help but be appreciative.

Mr. Harry Severin has followed this recipe with great success. His catalogue of Russian gold and platinum coins from 1701 to 1911 is definitive. In addition, he has included some gold medallic pieces of a commemorative nature. Some of these are not coins but they have come to be associated with the regular coinage.

Pre-revolutionary Russian numismatists conscientiously researched and published the coinage of their country from the time of Peter the Great. But their works are in Russian for the most part, and all are hard to find today. A compilation such as Mr. Severin has produced brings this knowledge again within the reach of all of us.

The present catalogue adopts the order of listing and the type of numismatic shorthand perfected by Christian Giel who served as Numismatic Secretary to the Grand Duke Georgii Mikhailovich. It is a remarkably clear and concise way of showing relative rarity, type of edge, whether the coins are originals or restrikes and similar technical details. In all, 649 separate gold and platinum coins are listed, and about 150 are illustrated. The relevant mint records form an appendix. Like the records of our mints they contain unexplained inconsistencies, as Mr. Severin points out.

There are other appendices of value beyond just the gold and platinum series. A millenium's worth of Russia's rulers parade in close order through two pages; there is an explanation of the Cyrillic letters and dating system used up into the early 18th Century, a roster of Moscow's and St. Petersburg's Russian, German, and occasional English die sinkers and mintmasters, and a comprehensive bibliography. In the bibliography I would have welcomed some brief notes comparatively evaluating the principal works listed. Giel & Ilyin, or Ilyin & Tolstoy, for example, are more dependable than Petrov or Chaudor.

Addicts of the Elder auctions as far back as the 1920's will remember Mr. Alex von Sandro as an indefatigable buyer of Russian coins. He and Mr. Severin with considerable success have walked where angels fear to tread. They have carried out that most subjective and controversial of numismatic projects — the compilation of a more or less permanent list of estimated market values. No one familiar with the series in question will agree entirely with their judgement, but who is likely to know better? The relative rarity as shown in the catalogue itself is based largely on Russian works published some 50 years ago. It is often widely out of step with the scale of estimated values, but the two need not match perfectly. Rarity and demand do not always go hand in hand, and in some cases a coin that was relatively common 50 years ago has become rare now. Perhaps the general scale of estimated values is high. But the book is printed to last. Doubtless prices which look bullish now will in due course turn out to be bearish.

Severin's work has been printed by the same German Firm that produces most of the American Numismatic Society's publications. It is well bound, on good paper, with excellent plates, and altogether a handsome job. Moreover, the printers have been able to provide various fonts of Russian and Cyrillic type in the text, as needed.

To summarize:

- (1). If you collect Russian gold and platinum, this is your standard work.
- (2). If you have the taste for the series but lack the means, Mr. Severin's book will give you a good $10.00 worth of vicarious enjoyment.
